

In practical training it is possible to test and rehearse applications of theoretical knowledge in a work context. Through reflection, it is possible to assess one's performance and one's knowledge. By reflecting and practicing, students come to realise the significance of theoretical knowledge and the importance of developing one's performance in practical situations. This, in turn, increases the motivation to study more. One or more of the factors shown in the figure may occur during student's practical training. During an effective and high-quality practical learning all the factors should be seen.
