University of California Chronicle, Vol. 5 (Classic Reprint), 2018-01-16 Excerpt from University of California Chronicle Vol 5 Wherever men and women meet to do honor to a university they meet in the faith that education is a life-long growth, not an access to books and teachers for a few fortunate years, but a process that keeps pace with life that broadens and deepens with experience. We test books by no less magical a touchstone than life itself. We search life unceasingly for the evidence of those great hopes which we have learned from literature. I wish to take this tenet of our common creed and apply it to a somewhat wider field than that of the individual. The national life too is a long process of education. The nation like the individual tests by experience the value of its bookish theories and out of its experience in turn springs its vital books. The history of literature in America is the history more or less accurately translated of American life. Not every phase of national existence it is true receives adequate translation into literature and yet most periods of heightened national consciousness have found some sort of literary interpretation.
