

Macbeth contemplates whether or not he can perform the dreadful deed of killing King Duncan. He is trying to build up the courage to fulfill his terrible desires. He knows that he must rush into the deed and think later if he is ever going to do it. Above all, he knows what he is about to do is wrong. He will only kill King Duncan if he can conquer his own conscience first.

Macbeth reveals a whole series of conflicting thoughts and feelings by talking aloud to the audience. This is called a soliloquy.

Macbeth tries to use his own selfish ambition to justify his actions. He attempts to detach himself from the true evil of the intended deed by personifying ambition and suggesting it is out of his control.

ACT 1, SCENE 7: Macbeth's castle.

Knockings and torches. Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service, and pass over the stage. Then enter MACBETH.

MACBETH: If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly: if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgement here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poisoned chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust;
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, horsed
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
And falls on the other.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

How now! What news?

Alliteration

This word shows that Macbeth recognises his intentions are a crime.

During this section Macbeth muses on the irony of Duncan's murder whilst staying with the Macbeths. He recognises that the King has done a lot for him and that he should be very grateful. Macbeth articulates two reasons why he should not kill King Duncan. Firstly, he is a subject of the King so should be a loyal servant to him. Secondly as host, he should protect King Duncan from intruders whilst he is in his care.

Macbeth declares that King Duncan has been a very good King and that his murder would therefore not be justified in the eyes of the heavens. This may result in God punishing everyone involved.
