A PEEP AT THE PIXIES - 6 of the most popular Pixie tales from Dartmoor Anon E. Mouse, 2018-09-26 It has been said since ancient times that Dartmoor is the haunt of the Pixies In this volume you will find 6 illustrated children's stories told in full about the Pixies of Dartmoor which go some way to explaining who the Pixies are and what they get up to when young heads start to rest heavily on pillows and the Sandman is about spreading his sleep dust These are the 6 most popular tales about Pixies which are being told in Cornwall and Devon to this day They Are Pixy Gathon or The Tailor's Needle The Three Trials or The Story of Crabby Cross The Seven Crosses of Tiverton or The Story of Pixy Picket Fontina or The Pixies Bath The Lady of The Silver Bell The Belfry Rock or The Pixies Revenge But why did they choose Dartmoor In this most pleasant part of England there are many hills and rivers with plenty of woods and fields hedgerows birds and flowers and a large tract of country called Dartmoor where the hills are so high that some of them are like mountains with a number of beautiful sparkling streams and waterfalls and a great many rocks some standing alone and others piled on the top of the heights in such odd ways that they look like the ruins of castles and towers built by the giants in the olden time these are called Tors They are so lofty that the clouds often hang upon them and hide their heads And what with its being so large and lonely and having very few trees except in one or two spots near a river Dartmoor is altogether though a wild a very grand place In short it is the ideal place for Pixies to take up residence Many a Pixy is sent out at night on works of mischief to deceive the old nurses and steal away young children or to do them harm This is noticed poet Ben Jonson who wrote Under a cradle I did creep By day and when the childe was asleep At night I suck'd the breath and rose And pluck'd the nodding nurse by the nose Many Pixies are solely bent on mischief and are sent forth to lead poor travellers a fine dance when trudging home through woods water bogs and quagmires If ever you are there late at night beware of the light from the Will o the Wisp for it may be a mischievous Pixie intent on having fun at your expense Not many have really seen a Pixie house It is often said to be in a rock sometimes however a mole hill is a palace for the elves or a hollow nut cracked by the joiner squirrel will contain the majesty of Pixy land Drayton describes their royal dwellings thus The walls of spiders legs are made Well morticed and finely laid He was the master of his trade It curiously that builded The windows of the eyes of cats And for a roof instead of slats Is covered with the skins of bats With moonshine that are gilded And now young friends having been told that the wild wastes of Dartmoor are said to be much haunted by Pixies proceed to these stories which we trust will afford you some amusement in those hours not devoted to your lessons or to more serious studies
