Transcending Law The Unintended Life Of Article 9 Of The Japanese Constitution:

Transcending Law Kenneth L. Port, 2010 Article 9 of the Japanese Constitution has engendered scholarship in Japanese and English as well as in other languages. It turns out that there are two versions of Article 9: the English version that purports to prevent Japan from rearming and insists on Japanese pacifism, and the Japanese version that is less absolute and imprecise. Japan has the fourth largest military in the world by dollars spent. This is called the great contradiction. For the first time, Professor Port resolves this recurrent debate by explaining that there are simply two versions of Article 9. Many parties, entities, and even individuals have joined this debate to give their interpretation, and there are at least two diametrically opposed interpretations. On the one hand, the long-time ruling Liberal Democratic Party interprets Article 9 very narrowly to say that Japan can do anything it wants as long as it is for the defense of the Japanese people. On the other hand, the Communist Party of Japan and many private people argue that Article 9 mandates complete Japanese pacifism and Japan should not possess a military for any purpose whatsoever. In Transcending Law, Professor Port points out that the only entity that has remained on the sidelines during this 60-year debate has been the Supreme Court of Japan, although it is the one body that has the authority to interpret the Constitution. Thoroughly and objectively, Port explains all viewpoints of this complicated topic. As Japan moves toward revising its Constitution, Port argues it is now time for the Supreme Court to be heard. Port argues that Japanese traditions and politics have combined with foreign pressures to produce a war machine despite the constitutional commitment to forever renounce war. It is compelling reading for a war-plagued world. Howard Anawalt, Professor Emeritus, Santa Clara University Law School.

Japan's Postwar Military and Civil Society Tomoyuki

Sasaki, 2015-08-27 Japan's so-called peace constitution renounces war as a sovereign right of the nation and bans the nation from possessing any war potential. Yet Japan also maintains a large world-class military organization, namely the Self Defence Forces (SDF). In this book, Tomoyuki Sasaki explores how the SDF enlisted popular support from civil society and how civil society responded to the growth of the SDF. Japan's Postwar Military and Civil Society details the interactions between the SDF and civil society over four decades, from the launch of rearmament in 1950. These interactions include recruitment, civil engineering, disaster relief, anti-SDF litigation, state financial support for communities with bases, and a fear-mongering campaign against the Soviet Union. By examining these wide-range issues, the book demonstrates how the militarization of society advanced as the SDF consolidated its ideological and socio-economic ties with civil society and its role as a defender of popular welfare. While postwar Japan is often depicted as a peaceful society, this book challenges such a view and illuminates the prominent presence of the military in people's everyday lives.

Storia del Giappone Rosa Caroli, Francesco Gatti, 2017-01-12 T00:00:00+01:00 Il Giappone una realtà culturalmente distante che sfida la nostra conoscenza e le nostre categorie interpretative. Convinzioni e pregiudizi alimentano spesso una visione distorta dimostrando come la sua percezione in termini di Estremo Oriente continui ad agire a molti livelli della nostra comprensione. Con una metodologia storiografica innovativa questo libro riduce le distanze narrando la storia del Giappone nei suoi aspetti economici sociali politici e culturali dalle origini sino ai giorni nostri. La parte finale si concentra sulle recenti trasformazioni che hanno peraltro contribuito a ridisegnare la fisionomia della società giapponese nel nuovo millennio dalle nuove strategie in politica interna ed estera al disastro della centrale nucleare di Fukushima dai mutamenti nel mondo del lavoro a quelli nella struttura familiare e negli stili di vita.
