An Exposition of All the Books of the Old and New Testaments Matthew Henry,1805

The Book of the Cave of Treasures Sir Ernest Alfred Thompson Wallis Budge,1927-01-01 IN the centuries immediately preceding the Christian Era certain professional Jewish scribes composed a number of works which may well be described as historical romances and which were based on the histories of the patriarchs and others as found in the four main divisions of the text of the Hebrew Bible There is little doubt that most of these works were written either in Hebrew or in the Palestinian vernacular of the period One of the oldest of such works appears to be the Book of Jubilees see page 3 also called the Lesser Genesis and the Apocalypse of Moses which derives its name from the fact that the periods of time described in it are Jubilees i e each period contains forty nine years It is more or less a Commentary on the Book of Genesis That a version of this book existed in Greek is proved by the quotations given by Epiphanius Bishop of Salamis in Cyprus born about A D 320 and died in 403 or 404 in his work on Heresies chapter xxxix The author claimed boldly that his work contains the revelations which were made to Moses by the command of God by the Archangel Michael who is frequently described as the Angel of the Face The book is not wholly original for it contains narratives and traditions derived from the works of earlier writers and some of the legends appear to have been taken from early Babylonian sources The Hebrew or Aramean original is lost and the complete work is only found in Ethiopic in which language it is known as K f l or Sections The Ethiopic translation was made from Greek Another pre Christian work also written by a Jew is the Book of Enoch which exists now in a more or less complete form only in an Ethiopic translation which was made from the Greek This work is quoted by St Jude vv 14 15 and there is little doubt that for some three or four centuries its authority both among the Jews and the Christians of the first and second centuries of our Era was very great Whether the Book of Enoch as made known to us by the Ethiopic version truly represents the original Hebrew work is fairly open to doubt in fact it seems certain that it does not It contains a series of fragments or parts of works of somewhat similar character which has been strung together and then added to by writers of different schools of religious thought at different periods In some parts of it traces have been found of beliefs which are neither Jewish nor Christian The present volume contains a complete translation of the Syriac text of the compendious history of the world from the Creation to the Crucifixion of our Lord which is commonly known as Me rath Gazz or the Cave of Treasures In the Syriac title the composition of the work is attributed to Ap h r m Sury y i e Ephrem Syrus or Ephraim the Syrian who was born at Nisibis soon after A D 306 and died in 373 but it is now generally believed that the form in which we now have it is not older than the VIth century An edition of the Syriac text and an Arabic version of it together with a German translation were published by Bezold Die Schatzh hle Munich 1883 86 but this work is scarce and is little known in England The German translation was made from an eclectic text constructed from at least three manuscripts which varied in age and accuracy and general literary value The translation given in the following pages has been made from the best in my opinion of all the known manuscripts namely British Museum MS Add 25875 See Wright Catalogue vol iii page 1064 This MS contains twelve complete works all of which were written in a fine Nestorian hand by the priest Hom the son of the priest Daniel a native of Al K sh a very ancient town which lies about 20 miles north of M sul Nineveh in the year of the Greeks 2020 i e A D 1709 It was written at the expense of the priest Joseph the son of Hormizd a native of Hordaphne in the district of Amedi for the church of the Blessed Virgin Mary in that place When I read through the manuscrin 1885 whilst preparing my edition of the Book of the Bee I was convinced that Hom the scribe was a very learned man and the marginal notes which he added to his copy showed that he was at once a capable and an understanding editor of Syriac texts When the printed edition of the Syriac text of the Cave of

Treasures appeared in 1886 I was surprised to find that Hom s text had not been made the foundation of the work Whilst I was in Al K sh in 1890 91 collecting manuscripts for the British Museum I found there some of Hom s descendants and of these one or two were professional scribes They possessed a few ancient Syriac manuscripts and from one of them I had copies made of the Cave of Treasures and the Book of the Bee On my return to England I collated the copy of the former work with the British Museum Codex and found that the text only varied in a few minor points There are a few mistakes in the British Museum MS and in one or two places a few words are omitted but as a whole it contains the text of the Cave of Treasures in as perfect form as ever we are likely to get it and therefore I have made the translation printed herein from it A text of this kind might be annotated to almost any extent but I have limited my notes to pointing out parallels in the Book of Jubilees the Book of Adam and Eve the Book of the Bee and other cognate works These are printed within square brackets immediately following the passages in the Cave of Treasures which they illustrate In the short Bibliography which follows the translation will be found the names of a number of books and of editions of texts which those who are interested in the literary history of the Cave of Treasures will find necessary for useful work I have also added a translation of the Testament of Adam a popular apocryphal work which is based upon the Syriac Cave of Treasures and upon legends derived from books of a similar and perhaps allied character The ancient tradition which asserts that the Cave of Treasures was written in the IVth century of our Era is supported by the general contents of the work These reproduce Ephraim s quaint and sometimes fanciful methods of exegesis and his hatred of the Jews and supply many examples of his methods in religious argument with which we are familiar from his other writings We may notice too his pride in the antiquity of the Syriac language That it was written in Mesopotamia by a Syrian there is no doubt and if we reject Ephraim as its author we are bound to admit that the author or perhaater editor belonged to the school of Ephraim Whichever view be taken is immaterial For the book certainly contains a mass of historical information which can only have been derived from pre Christian Hebrew works or from post Christian chronologies and histories written in Greek The writers of such Greek works derived some of their information at first or second hand from documents originally written in cuneiform Of the general historical character of the Cave of Treasures there is no doubt and it is this fact which gives it such importance for the history of the Hebrew Patriarchs and for early Christian History and the Christian Faith This view was maintained by the eminent scholars Dillmann N ldeke Sachau Wright Bezold and others during the last century and it was firmly held by Christians in Mesopotamia Syria Palestine Egypt Nubia and Abyssinia for the fourteen centuries preceding On the historical facts which form the framework of the Cave of Treasures the pious author or editor grafted a whole series of legends many of which deserve the descriptions of idle stories and vain fables which have been applied to them by Assem n and the older European theologians The reader having perused them will readily understand that such legends containing as they do garbled history facts and anachronisms are neither accepted nor endorsed by any member of the Committee of the Religious Tract Society or by myself These legends were inserted with the view of making the Cave of Treasures a sort of religious wonder book which would appeal to the vivid and credulous imaginations of Christian natives in almost every country of the Near East and religious wonder books were intended by their authors and editors to amuse as well as to instruct The Cave of Treasures possesses an apocryphal character it is true but the support which its contents give to the Christian Faith and the light which the historical portions of it throw on early Christian History entitle it to a very high place among the apocryphal Books of the Old and the New Testament These facts have induced the Committee of the Religious Tract Society to order the publication of this the first English translation of the Cave of Treasures Interior ,1923 An Exposition of All the Books of the Old and New Testaments: ... ,1810 Matchbox Dreams Book1: The Drapkin Kids in Dreamland Douglas Schwartz,2019-11-30 Matchbox Dreams is a collection of short stories developed to be read by an adult or older sibling to a child between the ages of 3 and 12 years old before a nap or bedtime Many of the stories will simultaneously be informative and entertaining for both children and readers Woven into the stories are examples of good behavior positive character traits and other messages that will reinforce children to be honest and respectful of others Through our stories we hope to give your child a head start on what to dream about All they have to do is lie down and continue the adventure in their dreams The first book The Drapkin Kids in Dreamland is a series of 20 short stories built around two incredibly adorable mice called Harper and Remy Later in the book Millie will join in These unique plush mice available on Amazon com are the guides to a magical Dreamland where new adventures await every corner Each night Harper Remy and Millie come alive through the short stories Each story is designed to be about 10 20 minutes long Gentleman's Magazine and Historical Review ,1739 A Commentary Upon the Historical Books of the Old Testament Simon Patrick,1738 All are Witnesses Delores Friesen,1996 The Catholic magazine ,1842
