Preparations for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Committee of Public Accounts, 2010 The Olympic Delivery Authority continues to make good progress with its delivery programme and the main construction projects are on track to be completed in time for testing in early 2011 The Department has committed to delivering the Games within the 9 325 million budget set in March 2007 Most of the budget is for the

Olympic Delivery Authority which has done well to control its costs and find savings across its programme enabling it to absorb additional costs for the Olympic Village and Media Centre projects These two projects are now being publicly funded contrary to original plans While 1 270 million of the original 2 747 million contingency within the Olympic budget now remains and is available to the Olympic Delivery Authority the majority is earmarked to meet known risks leaving only 194 million headroom It may be that not all of the known risks will materialise but new cost pressures continue to emerge Staying within the budget also depends on receiving some 600 million receipts from the Olympic Village development There is the risk of a deficit in the London Organising Committee LOCOG and there is no contingency fund in its budget Some 400 million of the income LOCOG still needs is to come from the sale of tickets It is still not clear what will happen to major assets including the Stadium and Media Centre after the Games and the consequent timing and value of any reimbursements to funders including the National Lottery

Programme Procurement in Construction John Mead, Stephen Gruneberg, 2013-03-06 This book adds to the impressive legacy of learning which is still emerging from the successful delivery of the London 2012 construction programme The authors combine the reforming zeal of a champion for change who was there every step of the way with academic rigour and the result is delivered with impressive passion and commitment to the topic All spenders and suppliers need to read this to understand how conventional understandings of procurement fall so dramatically short when applied to high value high risk acquisitions which invariably is what large construction projects represent Don Ward Chief Executive Constructing Excellence UK Successful construction is often attributed to one or more aspects of the delivery process from good planning design and clever engineering to efficient project management and quality construction Before any of these disciplines can begin they all require some form of procurement to select the team or supply chain to meet a client s or a project s specific requirements The concept of PSE Purchase and Supplier Engineering originated in the procurement of the construction and infrastructure required to stage the 30th Olympiad in London during 2012 At the time of writing PSE has successfully delivered almost 25bn of public procurement meeting client and project requirements and without legal challenge The construction of the venues and infrastructure needed to stage London 2012 was such a resounding success that it boosted not only the reputation of the UK construction industry but also the confidence of the UK population in the country s ability to organise build and run a major international event Its success has been lauded as something from which clients and industry could learn The ODA has established a comprehensive and informative body of evidence as part of a Learning Legacy While the ODA is well aware of the many elements of the procurement and supply chain management the complete end to end concept of how the Olympic supply chain procurements were managed has until now not been captured For example how does one buy the stage for an Olympic Games How does one manage the details of thousands of contracts and the many firms of contractors subcontractors and material suppliers and ensure that no one organisation adversely affects any other to the detriment of the programme How are a client s requirements beyond those of the capital asset realised as part of the investment How does one measure programme exposure or manage performance How does one measure capacity and the ability of firms to cope with the work and manage the risks involved Programme Procurement in Construction Learning from London 2012 covers the planning and preparation of a programme s procurement processes from understanding and developing the client s requirements to monitoring performance based on the benchmarks contractors set out in their own tender submissions The emphasis is on a close attention to detail to avoid surprises while keeping a focus on the total programme Purchase and Supplier Engineering provides an overview of managing the interest of firms in participating and the resulting capacity and workloads of all suppliers including the main contractors and the critical subcontractors and material suppliers Offering techniques tips and lessons learnt from the implementation of PSE on London 2012 and Crossrail this book is aimed at public and private sector clients developers senior management and those businesses and professionals involved in undertaking the procurement supply chain management and delivery of multiple construction projects or complex major construction programmes
