Underground Metal Pipeline Corrosion And Protectionchinese Edition:

Underground Pipeline Corrosion Mark Orazem, 2014-02-17 Underground pipelines transporting liquid petroleum products and natural gas are critical components of civil infrastructure making corrosion prevention an essential part of asset protection strategy Underground Pipeline Corrosion provides a basic understanding of the problems associated with corrosion detection and mitigation and of the state of the art in corrosion prevention The topics covered in part one include basic principles for corrosion in underground pipelines AC induced corrosion of underground pipelines significance of corrosion in onshore oil and gas pipelines numerical simulations for cathodic protection of pipelines and use of corrosion inhibitors in managing corrosion in underground pipelines The methods described in part two for detecting corrosion in underground pipelines include magnetic flux leakage close interval potential surveys CIS CIPS Pearson surveys in line inspection and use of both electrochemical and optical probes While the emphasis is on pipelines transporting fossil fuels the concepts apply as well to metallic pipes for delivery of water and other liquids Underground Pipeline Corrosion is a comprehensive resource for corrosion materials chemical petroleum and civil engineers constructing or managing both onshore and offshore pipeline assets professionals in steel and coating companies and academic researchers and professors with an interest in corrosion and pipeline engineering Reviews the causes and considers the detection and prevention of corrosion to underground pipes Addresses a lack of current readily available information on the subject Case studies demonstrate how corrosion is managed in the underground pipeline industry Collection of Papers on Underground Pipeline Corrosion, 1959 A Collection of Papers on Underground Pipeline Corrosion, 1957 Recommended Practice for Corrosion Protection of Underground Piping Networks Associated with Liquid Storage and Dispensing Systems Steel Tank Institute, 2006 A Collection of Papers on Underground Pipeline Corrosion, 1960 Corrosion and Corrosion Protection of Underground Steel Pipelines Mannesmannröhren-Werke, 199? Optimization of Corrosion in Underground Pipeline with Special Emphasis on Cathodic Protection and Its Effect on Design Operating and Maintenance Cost Jayanti K. Patel, 1976 A collection of papers on underground pipeline corrosion, 1967 Prediction Model of Underground Corrosion on Steel Pipeline Using In-situ Parameters Siti Nor Fariza Mior Mohd. Tahir, 2013 Soil Corrosion and Pipe Line Protection Scott Preston Ewing, 1938 Computer Simulation of Corrosion in an Underground Metal Network Arthur John Priest Clarke, University of Manchester, 1978 Corrosion Protection Design Report, Evergreen Pipeline Israel Cornet, 1972 Corrosion Protection for Water Industry Pipeline Systems IBC Technical Services Ltd, Institute of Corrosion, 1991 Assessment of Soil Corrosion in Underground Pipelines Via Statistical Inference Ayako Yajima, 2015 In the oil industry underground pipelines are the most preferred means of transporting a large amount of liquid product However a considerable number of unforeseen incidents due to corrosion failure are reported each year Since corrosion in underground pipelines is caused by physicochemical interactions between the material steel pipeline and the environment soil the assessment of soil as a corrosive environment is indispensable Because of the complex characteristics of soil as a corrosion precursor influencing the dissolution process soil cannot be explained fully by conventional semi empirical methodologies defined in controlled settings The uncertainties inherited from the dynamic and heterogeneous underground environment should be considered Therefore this work presents the unification of direct assessment of soil and in line inspection ILI with a probabilistic model to categorize soil corrosion To pursue this task we employed a model based clustering analysis via Gaussian mixture models The analysis was performed on data collected from southeastern Mexico The clustering approach helps to prioritize areas to be inspected in terms of underground conditions and can improve repair decision making beyond what is offered by current assessment methodologies This study also addresses two important issues related to in situ data missing data and truncated data The typical approaches for treating missing data utilized in civil engineering are ad hoc methods However these conventional approaches may cause several critical problems such as biased estimates artificially reduced variance and loss of statistical power Therefore this study presents a variant of EM algorithms called Informative EM IEM to perform clustering analysis without filling in missing values prior to the analysis This model based method introduces additional cluster specific Bernoulli parameters to exploit the nonuniformity of the frequency of missing values across clusters In line inspection tools ILI are commonly used for pipeline defect detection and characterization with advanced technologies such as magnetic flux leakage MFL and ultrasonic tools UT Each technology has its limitation for minimum detectable defect size As a result the data measured by different technologies are difficult to compare under the same modeling framework In the present study this problem will be addressed considering two datasets measured by MFL and UT Moreover a truncated generalized exponential TGE distribution is introduced to describe the observed data The non informative Jeffreys prior is used to establish the Bayesian updating algorithm and the Markov chain Monte Carlo MCMC method is adopted to estimate the posterior distribution of model
